Leadfoots still a danger on the roads

Highway construction zones. Province says there are far too many speeding infractions despite clampdown consisting of increased fines and photo-radar

Despite the stepped-up enforcement, heftier fines and increased education, Saskatchewan's speeding in highway construction zones isn't slowing down.

At least, not nearly enough, the provincial government said on Thursday.

There were 83 such offence notices issued in only a two-week period in mid-August, including seven tickets for driving more than 30 km/h over the posted 60 km/h limit.

And this despite a focused campaign to make motorists aware of new orange signs and higher fines for the infractions.

"When we were introducing photo-radar in construction zones, we hoped we would never have to issue a ticket and that we hoped that the deterrent would work," Don McMorris, minister of highways and infrastructure, said in Saskatoon.

"What's even more disconcerting is there was a number of them over 90 km/h in a 60 km/h zone. Obviously, the message isn't getting through to some of the drivers."

About 45 construction projects are under way on Saskatchewan highways, including three that began this week.

McMorris added, however, that while the number of tickets remains alarmingly high, crews on the roads have noticed a difference.

"After talking with many construction companies, they are finding the speeds are reduced and more people are obeying," he said.

"I think the vast majority do (slow down). But still, it's disconcerting when we have 80 tickets issued."

The citations came through regular on-the-ground enforcement or photograph-based radar that was introduced on highways earlier this summer.

The crackdown on speeding has come largely as a response to a tragedy in which a woman was struck and killed by a vehicle while she worked on a highway crew in rural Saskatchewan last year.

"Photo-radar is there as a deterrent (and) there is more enforcement in the orange zones this year," McMorris said.

"That's why, as time goes on, people (will) realize the enforcement is there, the signage is proper. And they will start obeying."

CFL great Clermont named to Regina
Sports Hall of Fame

After so many great catches, this is something Jason Clermont is particularly pleased to receive.

The retired CFL receiver was named on Thursday as one of several inductees to the Regina Sports Hall of Fame.

"It's an honour, especially with the other inductees that are going in this year," Clermont, a Regina native who starred with the Saskatchewan Roughriders and the B.C. Lions, said at a press event at the Co-operators Centre. The other honourees include bowling great Flo Rolls.

A product of the city's minor sports system, Clermont praised fellow inductees Leo Antonini and Kelly Hamilton for their roles in boosting Regina's minor football program.

"If it wasn't for guys like that, then young players wouldn't have the opportunity to play high school with their respective team, to junior, to university, to the CFL," Clermont told Metro.

Rolls, who represented

Canada at an international bowling tournament in 1987, said she's surprised by the honour.

"It was a sport I loved to do," she said.

Other inductees include Dick White, the University of Regina's athletic director, Marnie Eistetter, a synchronized-swimming staple, and the 1932-to-1936 Regina Nationals baseball team.

Regina's first BuskFest to throw the city for a loop

Part of Culture Days.
Organizers, performers prepared for 'different, weird' art on the street

ALYSSA MCDONALD

It's common to see a few buskers playing instruments in downtown Regina — but imagine an event just for street performers to show off their talents.

That's what BuskFest has in store this month, according to Creative City Centre.

The non-profit organization is planning a two-hour event for buskers to take over downtown as part of Culture Days, which is happening from Sept. 27 to 29.

"It's giving space for Regina's talent — especially the talent like the hula-hooping and some of the music performers — that wouldn't necessarily have a big show," co-ordinator Shayna Stock said.

"It's just to have a space for them to come and play in the park."

Downtown pedestrians got a little taste of the event when Creative City Centre held open auditions on Thursday.

By noon, they had received 13 submissions, though many of them were in video format.

One act that tried out live was Joshua Grassick and Beki Stilborn, doing their What the Funk hula-hoop routine.

"We've never really made a choreography or a duet thing until now," Stilborn said, adding she has been "hooping" for two years, "and we thought that would give an edge for the audition."

The pair hopes to be among the acts taking over the streets for BuskFest, which will involve a noon walking tour on Sept. 27.

Stock said they want a diverse mix of performances.

"We really like to perform with our hoops... It brings a lot of joy," Stilborn said.

"And Regina needs to see some more different, weird arts," Grassick added.

Transit system failing U of R campus, students union says

Regina Transit is being criticized by the University of Regina students union for what that organization says is poor service to the main campus. MARCO VIGLIOTTI/METRO

'Centre hub' Free Friday rides this month aimed in part at helping students, Regina Transit says

marco.vigliotti@metronews.ca

As a "centre hub" of the city, the University of Regina should be better served by the municipal transit system, the head of the school's students union says.

"We still feel much more focus should be paid to the university," Nathan Sgrazzutti said. "It's not the easiest thing in the world to get to the university through the city transit."

Despite the boasts of city officials, Sgrazzutti argued that route changes implemented

Quoted

"It's not the easiest thing in the world to get to the university through city transit."

Nathan Sgrazzutti,
head of U of R student union

by Regina Transit this summer will not make travelling to the campus significantly easier.

"They think they fixed it — but we're quite adamant that they haven't," he said.

According to Regina Transit, the university is one of the most heavily served locations in the city, with five routes running to the school.

When the university is in session, about 40,000 "unique" trips are made monthly by post-secondary students, said Tracy Kondratiuk, a market research analyst with Regina Transit.

"(The school) has some of our highest ridership," she said. "That's why they're the location with the most routes."

In fact, Regina Transit's newest promotion — free service on Fridays throughout September — was timed to coincide with the surge of ridership at the start of the school year, Kondratiuk said.

She added that the transit system wants to use this opportunity to encourage students to take the bus instead of driving, which could be a tough sell this year with the U of R's notorious campus parking squeeze apparently worsening.

If more students were drawn to the transit system, Sgrazzutti said, it would improve the chances of bringing a universal bus pass to the school — the kind already instituted at many post-secondary institutions across Canada.

Another U.S. retailer — this time Cabela's — is soon to open in Regina

The hunt is almost over for Regina outdoor types searching for another retailer.

U.S.-based Cabela's will open its first location in the Queen City on Sept. 19 at the Grasslands Shopping Centre, and the 50,000-square-foot store will be only the fourth Canadian location for the chain.

"(The store is) for the outdoor adventurer — beyond hunting and fishing — and people that just want to spend time outdoors," general manager Dwayne Boddy explained while guiding media through the building on Thursday.

Fishing supplies, he said, tend to be the company's bestsellers.

Unusual Cabela's offerings include large displays of camouflage clothing, testable fishing reels, a fudge shop and an archery range for customers to try the store's bows.

The most striking features, though, might be the store's realistic stuffed-animal displays.

mal displays.

At the back of the retail area, a small waterfall is surrounded by grizzlies, mountain goats and other majestic creatures native to North America.

"We want to sell the event of coming to our store, and this builds into the event," Boddy said, noting that many of the animals were donated to Cabela's.

"We refer to this as the focal point of the store."

The Regina site offers a meeting room for the use of local, provincial and national wildlife associations — including Ducks Unlimited and the Saskatchewan Wildlife Federation.

The president of the Saint Mary's University Student Association says he knew about and participated in a chant glorifying the rape of underage girls — but will not step down.

"We want to be some serious advocates about sexual assault and we want to turn this around and educate more students," said Jared Perry during a news conference in Halifax Thursday.

Eighty student leaders and three SMUSA executive members will undergo sensitivity training after a video surfaced of them leading hundreds of first-year students in the chant, which spells out the word "young" with lines like, "'u' is for underage, 'n' is for no consent."

Perry said the chant has been taught to frosh for "years." He said he and the other leaders just didn't think about the message.

"It's more about the rhyme and the chant behind it," he said. "As odd as it sounds, we didn't see the message ... we now realize that it's extremely serious and we don't want it to happen any more."

Perry has resigned as chair of the Students Nova Scotia group, but will not give up the office of SMUSA president.

"It's definitely the biggest mistake I've made throughout my university career and

Saint Mary's president Dr. Colin Dodds called the chant "completely inexcusable."

"My colleagues and I were shocked by this incident and are deeply sorry that our students, and now the community at large, were exposed to disturbing sexually charged material," he said in a statement. "I am taking measures to ensure it does not happen in the future."

Obama presses leaders to support a strike on Syria

G20 summit. The U.S. president runs into opposition to military action from Russia, China and the European Union

U.S. President Barack Obama pressed fellow world leaders on Thursday to support a U.S.-led strike on Syria, but he ran into opposition from Russia, China and even the EU — which condemned the recent chemical weapons attack in Bashar Assad's country but declared it too soon for military action.

"The use of chemical weapons in Syria is not only a tragedy but also a violation of international law that must be addressed," Obama insisted during a meeting with Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe at the G20 summit, where he mostly made his case behind the scenes.

China's G20 delegation spokesman, Qin Gang, was among those who countered, saying: "War isn't the fundamental way to solve problems in Syria."

The prospect of military action against Syria overshadowed the global growth agenda at the two-day summit, which opened Thursday in the Russian city of St. Petersburg. Leaders did, however, discuss the crisis during a dinner hosted by Russian President Vladimir Putin, one of the Syrian government's strongest supporters.

White House advisers said Obama was seeking "political and diplomatic" support from his international counterparts, not necessarily military cooperation. And Ben Rhodes, Obama's deputy national security adviser, said the type of action the U.S. is contemplating "does not come with significant requirements of international participation."

While Obama has long called for the ouster of Assad, the chemical weapons attack near Damascus two weeks ago pushed the U.S. to the brink of military action for the first time during Syria's civil war. The U.S. position on Syria has increased tensions with Putin, one of Assad's most important backers. Putin has blocked efforts at the UN to take action and has questioned intelligence reports U.S. officials say link the chemical weapon deployment to the Syrian leader.

U.K.: New evidence gas used

U.K. scientists have found new evidence that poison gas was used last month outside of Damascus, U.K. Prime Minister David Cameron said Thursday in an interview with the BBC. Cameron said that the evidence "further shows the use of chemical weapons in that Damascus suburb." The BBC's account of the interview did not make clear whether the tests had determined who was responsible for the attack.

PM Harper takes firm stand on Syria, debt-reduction

Prime Minister Stephen Harper is taking a firm position on two controversial issues at this year's G20 summit, with little hope of achieving a wider consensus with his fellow leaders on either front.

With Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird and Finance Minister Jim Flaherty in tow to hammer home his messages, Harper made it clear that a military strike is necessary against Syria; and that countries should be setting hard targets for reducing their debts, as Canada is now doing.

U.S. to scale back stimulus gradually: Russian official

Russia's finance minister says U.S. President Barack Obama assured G20 leaders that the U.S. will be scaling back its stimulus policy. The prospect of the U.S. Federal Reserve scaling back its policy of quantitative easing has dampened hopes of a global recovery and has already caused weakness in emerging market currencies.

Anton Siluanov told reporters that in response to other world leaders' concerns, Obama said that the U.S. will be withdrawing stimulus "gradually".

Tax offensive sets sights on Google, Amazon

Russia's finance minister says that G20 leaders have agreed on a plan to take on multinational companies who tuck away their profits in offshore jurisdictions.

Speaking after Thursday's first G20 session, Anton Siluanov said leaders are indignant over the policies of giants like Google and Amazon, who "make money in one country" but pay lower taxes elsewhere. The G20 leaders agreed on a plan that would prevent these companies from using loopholes and tax havens, Siluanov said.

Human-rights activists stage individual protests at G20

Spaced out along St. Petersburg's main thoroughfare, about a dozen activists staged protests to attract the attention of leaders of the world's biggest economies to human-rights violations in Russia.

Activist Iosiph Skakovsky said they held individual protests because mass protests are often banned or disrupted by police. Activist Natalya Tsymbalova was protesting "discrimination of sexual minorities, falsification of elections, pressure on NGOs, violation of the freedom of public assembly."

Police hope dead pig can help solve disappearances

The RCMP in Saskatchewan is setting out to solve the mystery of where bodies go when people disappear in the North Saskatchewan River.

Mounties have placed a 68-kilogram pig carcass, equipped with a radio tracking device and a temperature gauge, in the river near North Battleford. Police will head out on the water next week to track the carcass's movement toward Nipawin.

They hope their long-planned experiment will turn up potential patterns of where bodies go when they drift downstream.

Const. Tyler Hadland, with the Saskatoon Historical Case Unit, says several people have presumably gone missing in the river and their bodies have not been found.

Police may allow the carcass to stay in the river until spring to allow for more detailed observations.

The redesigned look is part of a makeover that Yahoo Inc. has been undergoing since the Sunnyvale, Calif., company hired Google executive Marissa Mayer to become Yahoo's CEO 14 months ago.

Google seeks to dismiss privacy lawsuit

Google's attorneys say their long-running practice of electronically scanning the contents of people's Gmail accounts to help sell ads is legal, and are asking a U.S. federal judge to dismiss a lawsuit that seeks to stop the practice.

In court records filed in advance of a federal hearing Thursday in San Jose, Calif., Google argues that "all users of email must necessarily expect that their emails will be subject to automated processing."

The class action lawsuit, filed in May, says Google "unlawfully opens up, reads, and acquires the content of people's private email messages" in violation of California's privacy laws and federal wiretapping statutes.

YOUR UNIVERSITY

Realize. We're growing by record numbers.

The University of Regina is attracting more students than ever before.

This fall, more than 13,300 students are taking courses at the University, marking the third straight year we have set a new enrolment record, and the fifth consecutive annual increase in student numbers.

There are many reasons why more students than ever are choosing the University of Regina for their post-secondary education. The dedication to teaching excellence demonstrated by faculty members across campus, educational programming designed to meet our students' needs, and the welcoming campus environment we provide for our students – these are only a few of the things we offer to help our students succeed.

We are proud of the learning community we have created at the University of Regina, and prouder still that our community continues to grow each year.

- ✓ 2013 – enrolment record 13,300 students
- ✓ Three consecutive years of record enrolment totals
- ✓ Five consecutive years of enrolment increases
- ✓ 1,400 self-declared Aboriginal students – more than 10% of student body
- ✓ More than 10% annual increase in international student enrolment

8 Critter bites Mike Fisher. Carrie Underwood posted videos on Vine of her NHL player hubby picking up a chipmunk with his bare hand after it snuck into their home, and then the bite marks it left on him. This is proof celebs really are just like us. Well maybe not, we'd use a bucket and gloves.

9 WatchABC.com. The future of TV is online. Three ABC comedies — The Goldbergs, Trophy Wife and Back in the Game — will debut on WatchABC.com (from Sept. 3 to 17) before they hit TV screens.

10 Twitter etiquette. I always find it amusing when someone complains about what you're tweeting about. Comedian @rickygervais summed it up best this week when he tweeted: “Following someone on Twitter & complaining about their tweets is like secretly stalking someone & telling them they're going the wrong way.”

Animal vows never to play badminton again

This prickly mess was the result of a hedgehog becoming tangled in a badminton net in a British garden. The tangle blocked the mammal's spines and mouth. Luckily, the animal was rescued. METRO

Hedgehog facts

Get to know the neighbour in your garden.

- Spines. Adults have between 5,000 to 7,000 quills on their back and tail.
- Family. A cousin of the shrew, but unrelated to similar-looking porcupines.

Advice

“This serves as a reminder for people who use garden sports sets to ensure they are safely removed and stored. Had we not been called the hedgehog would not have survived.”

Dudley Clements
Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (RSPCA)

Prickly number

The percentage by which the hedgehog population is estimated to have shrunk this century in Britain, leading to fears of extinction. Actions such as Hedgehog Awareness Week have been launched in the hope of reversing this trend.

Summer's winding down and with that means summer holidays are grinding to a halt, too. If you didn't get out of town as much as you hoped, the Interwebs are here to quench that travel thirst. In lieu of hitting the Trans-Canada in that VW van, we bring you Instagram accounts from across Canada (so you can get a peek and see where you want to hit next summer).

They don't call it “beautiful B.C.” for nothing. Scott Rankin makes Vancouver look kind of like paradise (or at least like Canada's real ocean playground).

Predictably, the province's tourism

@visitnovascotia:

From pics of beaches and bridges to lighthouses and lakes, Nova Scotia's tourism account shows the best of the province (though please pardon some of the cliché imagery).

RE: Not All Teachers Created Equal; He Says column, published Sept. 5

I was very offended by a statement that Mr. Mazerolle stated in his article.

I find it ironic that he's speaking out against labelling, or other forms of prejudgment, however, he is critiquing my profession of ten years, my parents livelihood and the reason I'm debt free after a honorary psychology degree and going to become an environmental technologist.

My parents never “sling or spitballed” any teacher because of their insinuated lack of education. As a matter of fact, they've worked their way up from youth to franchise a store, and now they are paying for my education, because they know and respect teachers and education.

They also respect hard work and dedication to their job. So before Mr. Mazerolle belittles cashiers maybe he should realize, that last time I checked, cashiers are people, too.

Synopsis

In Vin Diesel's fourth outing as the mercenary-turned-enforcer, he has been double-crossed and left for dead. "I don't know how many times I've been crossed off the list," he mumbles in a voice-over, "but this ain't nothing new." He spends his days battling aliens until not one, but two teams of bounty hunters land on the planet. The first team, lead by Santana (Jordi Mollà) wants Riddick dead so they can collect the ransom. The other team, headed by Boss Johns (Matt Nable) wants him alive for questioning. As the bounty hunters bang heads, Riddick plans a wild scheme of vengeance and escape from this desolate planet.

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Riddick is heavy on the filters and crazy creatures, but light on entertainment. CONTRIBUTED

Just plain Riddickulous

Riddick. Tawdry graphics, cheesy dialogue and gratuitous nudity doesn't even make this film campy fun

Richard: Mark, Riddick should have been titled Riddickulous. With its cheap effects, cheesy dialogue, gratuitous nudity and testosterone-laced characters, it might provide midnight movie-style nostalgia for anyone who grew up on direct-to-video sci-fi flicks in the 1980s. Anyone else might want to go back to the original movie in this series, Pitch Black, and enjoy a movie that actually kinda makes sense. This is the rare movie that is actually better when the star isn't in it. What did you think?

Mark: The movie has a look, I have to admit, and it kept me connected to the film for the first 40 minutes. The director has never met a filter he didn't like. But Vin Diesel didn't bother me as much as the movie itself. It's so grim and ugly it's hard to watch. And after the first 40, kind of boring, which is unforgivable.

RC: I agree with you about the stark look of the film. There's no eye candy, although some of the creatures are pretty cool, but I'm on the opposite page regarding Diesel's solo act for the first 40 minutes. I didn't think this movie worked at all until he gave up the Survivorman act and the bounty hunters showed up. Then, for my money, it became a typical bad movie instead of a surreally bad film.

MB: And didn't that part of the film feel to you like a video game right down to the tawdry graphics? And if it's silly you're looking for, I'm glad to see that women in outer space are still wearing eyeliner.

RC: You want silly? How about fending off a vicious dog-creature by starting an impromptu game of fetch?

Or maybe using words like "jamoque" in the far distant future. If the movie had embraced its silliness instead of taking itself so seriously in all the wrong ways, I might have enjoyed it more!

MB: I might have enjoyed it more if it were a completely different movie. I like Diesel in his Fast and Furious franchise, so maybe this flick needed some car races to soup it up. As I watched it, I gave it some grudging admiration for the purity of its grim vision. Then there's an eleven-hour act of gratuitous kindness that makes no sense at all and ruins what little the film has going for it.

dently still on the Great Comeback Tour that began last year with Bernie, Magic Mike and Killer Joe and is continuing with Mud and The Wolf of Wall Street. Good.

Why not: This could be self-important. But it sounds crazy enough that it might just work!

Will get an Oscar for: Best Matthew McConaughey performance of 2013.

About Time (Nov. 1)

What: British rom-com artist Richard Curtis (Love Actually) long ago became a genre unto himself, but lately he's been trying to wiggle his way out. Pirate Radio wasn't romantic at all, and his latest concerns time travelling: A young man (Domhnall Gleeson) tries to change his love life with magic and — whaddya know? — gets Rachel McAdams.

Why: The most annoying thing about Curtis is that, insufferable though his films regularly are, they tend to have various degrees of charm.

Why not: He still made Love Actually.

Will get an Oscar for: Best attempt to shake up a desiccating career with a sci-fi gimmick.

Thor: The Dark World (Nov. 8)

What: Everyone's favourite hammer-wielding Norse god who's the source of fish-out-of-water jokes (Chris Hemsworth) goes solo again. This time he battles totally different superpowerful beings.

Why: The first was moderately amusing, though presumably this time our square-jawed brickhouse of a hero knows better than to request a horse at a pet shop.

Why not: In other words, what's left to show?

Will get an Oscar for: Best use of a Hemsworth brother.

The Wolf of Wall Street (Nov. 15)

What: Martin Scorsese returns to keyed-up, gleefully amoral Goodfellas mode,

The Armstrong Lie is Alex Gibney's second high profile doc in six months.

The little films...

- How I Live. The ever-ubiquitous Saoirse Ronan once again plays a young girl in duress, this time stuck on her lonesome in the countryside as a third world war breaks out.
- The Armstrong Lie. You think Tyler Perry makes too many movies? This look at Lance Armstrong is Alex Gibney's second high profile documentary in the last six months, after the disappointing Julian Assange hit job WikiLeaks: We Steal Secrets.

- Nebraska. Alexander Payne follows up The Descendants with this more simplified drama, shot in black-and-white and following a road trip taken by a man (Will Forte) and his grumbling father (Bruce Dern).

only this time about even worse people: stockbrokers (played by Leonardo DiCaprio and Jonah Hill).

Why: If this isn't ridiculously entertaining and hugely quotable, then there's no god.

Why not: There's probably no god anyway. But seriously, there's zero chance this isn't a blast. Have we mentioned Matthew McConaughey, currently waist-deep in career repairmen mode, is in it?

Will get an Oscar for: Best movie ever.

The Hunger Games: Catching Fire (Nov. 22)

What: Some girl with a weird name that rhymes with "cat piss" (Jennifer Lawrence) continues her adventures outsmarting a dystopian future society with her archery skills while choosing which nice boy to be with.

Why: The books (or at least the first one) are some of the easiest reads in memory. And by easiest, we mean they're stupid and poorly written without being distractingly so a la the works of Dan Brown.

Why not: The Battle Royale films (even the somewhat underrated sequel) do this better, and give you R-rated carnage to boot. But do they feature "futuristic" names like Haymitch Abernathy and Caesar Flickerman?

Will get an Oscar for: Best terrible names.

Ender's Game (Nov. 1)

What: Orson Scott Card's classic 1985 novel about kids (Asa Butterfield and Hailee Steinfeld) trained for military battle against aliens finally gets the big budget adaptation for which its author likely always pined.

Why: The novel is one of sci-fi's brainiest, and hey, there's Harrison Ford presumably grumbling up a storm as one of the elders.

Why not: In case you haven't heard, Card is a gigantic homophobe who called for revolution if gay marriage was ever implemented and now thinks people who hate him are being intolerant. But this isn't the first — or gazillionth — time a legitimately awful human being has produced good art.

Will get an Oscar for: Most talented dedicated homophobe.

Director's methods works for Drinking Buddies cast

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

For some actors, director Joe Swanberg's mostly improvised method can be daunting, but others — like his Drinking Buddies cast of Olivia Wilde, Ron Livingston, Anna Kendrick and Jake Johnson — find it exhilarating. Swanberg gives us some insight into his writing and editing process and his stringent "no yelling" policy for himself on set.

How much of this was improvised and how much did you plot out?

The plot was pretty heavily figured out before we shot anything. The size of the movie and the infrastructure involved meant that we had to schedule it, we had to lock down locations. We had to know what the story was going to be and even what the scenes were going to be in a vague way. Being my own editor allows me to be a little more open as a director. Editing becomes a lot of the writing process.

How do you go about pitching this sort of process to actors?

It's a very conversational pitch. I talk about where the themes came from, how

I relate to the story, what I'm pulling from my own life, and I feel like that's a nice lead-in to discussing how their own stories can enter into the picture. The goal ultimately is to have it be a kind of collaborative performing and writing process, so I'm looking for people who are open to sharing and talking about those kinds of things — relationship things.

Did you find some actors just didn't quite go for that?

Sure. I met a lot of great actors, people whose work I admire, who just either weren't excited by the improv process or for one reason or another thematically this wasn't a story they were interested in telling right now. I mean, there's a lot of reasons why somebody would or wouldn't want to do this movie, but I think people were all curious.

Director. Nicolas Winding Refn

Stars. Ryan Gosling, Kristin Scott Thomas

Danish director Nicolas Winding Refn's followup to his sleek neo-noir breakthrough Drive doubles down on the idea of Ryan Gosling as a strong, silent antihero: this time out, he's the heir to an American drug-running empire, stranded in Bangkok and feuding with a retired police captain who conducts interrogations with a machete. The slow pace, and pulsing synth score suggest that Refn is going for a mesmerizing atmosphere, but the overall effect is simply numbing. ADAM NAYMAN

50 Shades of no way! Fans start online petition to change cast

Not everyone was thrilled with the announcement that Charlie Hunnam and Dakota Johnson will star in the 50 Shades of Grey movie. Fans of the steamy book even launched a petition to have the roles recast with their choices, Alexis Bledel and Matt Bomer. "Matt Bomer is the PERFECT DESCRIPTION OF CHRISTIAN GREY AND ALEXIS BLEDEL IS THE PERFECT ACTRESS TO REPRESENT ANASTASIA STEELE and if THEY ARE NOT, NOBODY WILL BE," the levelheaded petition on Change.org reads. "I read the whole trilogy and I can assure that Matt is the perfect actor for this movie and Alexis too. So please PLEASE, all of the GREYsessed and Bomerettes in the world NEED those actors. They always will be for us the Christian Grey and Anastasia Steele. WE CAN DO ANYTHING GUYS, ANYTHING." The petition has already pulled in more than 18,000 supporters.

Lady Gaga

Not feeling 'real wind for years' has made Lady go a little bit Gaga

Part of Lady Gaga's evolution as a pop star includes learning to go outside more. The singer tells the Guardian that she used to think she needed to stay in hiding to maintain her image. "I hid in my house ... to preserve my image as a superstar to my fans," she tells the newspaper. "I don't mean I am a superstar, I mean that they only ever see me at my best. And it really drove me crazy. So I've really had to make more of an effort to go out more. I mean, can you imagine what it's like not to feel real wind? Honestly, I hadn't felt real wind for years."

Where in the world is Lamar Odom?

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Just what is going on with Lamar Odom? The Internet was abuzz on Thursday with the news that troubled Kardashian man piece Lamar Odom had checked himself into rehab in order to save his marriage to Kourtney Kardashian. It hasn't been the best month for Odom — numerous reports have surfaced that he cheated on Kourtney with a stripper and he's come clean about his addiction to OxyContin, Ambien and cocaine — but not before he was arrested for a DUI last week in California (so maybe add "alcohol" to that list, Lamar?).

But then TMZ.com came out with the bombshell that Odom is nowhere near a rehab centre and Kourtney has heard nothing from him. So where oh-where is Odom? Who knows? If only someone would create a show called Keeping up with the Kardashians so we could keep tabs.

Scarlett Johansson

News just in ... Johansson and journalist engaged

Scarlett Johansson is engaged to her journalist boyfriend, Romain Dauriac, the actress' rep confirms to E! News, saying that the pair are "very happy" with the development. "They haven't chosen a wedding date yet," the rep says. Johansson and Dauriac first went public with their romance last November and have kept things pretty low-key since. This will be Johansson's second marriage after her 2011 divorce from Ryan Reynolds.

Naomi Watts

No one knows Watts the matter with Naomi

Naomi Watts is apparently not having the best time on her current press tour for Diana, in which she plays the late Princess of Wales during the final years of her life. Watts apparently cut short an interview with British radio host Simon Mayo, though it's unclear what prompted her early exit. "Naomi Watts walked out of an interview. She seemed a tad uncomfortable with the questions. Shame," Mayo posted to Twitter, later insisting to responders that he had "no idea" what riled her so much. The abbreviated interview is set for broadcast next week.

Watts' camp has not yet responded to the report.

King of global grapes

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

There are a lot of grapes in the wine world. While some are variations on a single varietal, the majority are standalone berries — many of which never see a vine outside of their particular geography.

Some, though, are international superstars. Think chardonnay, sauvignon blanc and riesling on the white side, and pinot noir, merlot and cabernet sauvignon on the red side.

Cabernet sauvignon is arguably king. An accompaniment of fruit, it's one of the few grapes that keeps its core taste profile when it travels. You'll find its blackberry to black currant flavours and typically oak-influenced power whether you're catching a cab in Bordeaux, France or Ontario's Niagara Peninsula.

Cabernet has had a love affair with California for decades. Famous for producing powerful, palate-pounding wines in The Golden State, the recent Cali trend is toward plump, juicier versions.

Trinchero Family Estates' 2011 The Show Cabernet Sauvignon ($17.95 to $19.99) is about red berry expression and balanced tannins. PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

School lunch. Skip the tired ham-and-cheese sandwich and roll up this Any-You-Want-It 'Sushi'

No, this isn't real sushi. It is a whole-wheat tortilla filled with meat, then rolled up and sliced into maki-style sushi rounds. It's fast, easy, delicious and healthy.

If you like, add vegetables (leafy greens and grated carrots work particularly well).

You can even accompany this with containers of honey mustard or barbecue sauce for dipping the "sushi."

Want to take this in a different direction? Substitute peanut butter for the cream cheese and a banana for the meats. Sprinkle in a few mini chocolate chips, then roll and slice.

1. Spread cream cheese evenly over one side of tortilla. Be sure to spread cream cheese all the way to the edge, as this helps seal

Ingredients

- 1 to 2 tbsp cream cheese
- 8-inch whole-wheat tortilla
- 1 to 2 oz thinly sliced meat (salami, steak, cooked chicken or turkey, or deli meats, such as ham or prosciutto)

the roll shut and keep it from unwrapping.

2. Arrange the meat (and any vegetables you want to add) in an even layer over the tortilla. Be sure to leave about 1 inch of cream cheese exposed along the edges.

3. Roll tortilla and fillings into a tight bundle. If tortilla won't stay sealed shut, spread just more cream cheese along the edge to help glue it tight. Use a serrated knife to cut the roll into 1-inch rounds.

Outstanding play has Sheets in line for major hardware

CFL. Roughriders rusher early favourite for outstanding player

Kory Sheets has been the CFL's most dominant player this season.

The Saskatchewan Roughriders running back is not only leading the league in rushing with 1,149 yards, he's also on pace to become the most dominant single-season runner in league history. Sheets is on pace to finish with nearly 2,300 yards, which would shatter the current mark of 2,065 set in 1998 by former Montreal Alouettes star Mike Pringle.

The five-foot-11, 208-pound Sheets is the runaway favourite at the halfway point of the season for the CFL's outstanding player award.

Quarterbacks have traditionally dominated the annual vote by the Football Reporters of Canada, winning it 17 times since 1990. Running backs have won it three times over that span, with Pringle doing so twice (1995, 1998).

The other was Toronto's Mike (Pinball) Clemons in 1990.

The hard-running Sheets has helped the Riders (8-1)

Durant gets his

Riders QB Darian Durant is the CFL's offensive player of the month for August.

- Durant completed 86-of-129 passes for 1,172 yards and nine TDs as Saskatchewan picked up wins in three of its four games.
- He leads the CFL with 21 TD passes against just one interception.
- Riders kicker Chris Milo was special-teams player of the month after making all 11 of his field goals.

assume top spot in the ultra-competitive West Division with the CFL's best record. If Saskatchewan can remain there, it would give the squad home-field advantage for the conference final and a shot at reaching the Grey Cup game, which will be played at Mosaic Stadium.

The Riders are attempting to become the third straight team to win the CFL title on home soil following the B.C. Lions in 2011 and Toronto Argonauts last year. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Week 11 pick

Roughriders (8-1) at Bombers (1-8), Sunday, 2 p.m. (TSN).

A season of misery continues for Winnipeg, which actually had a decent opening half Labour Day before the Riders took control en route to a 48-24 victory. Quarterback Darian Durant was a solid 24-of-35 passing for 315 yards and four TDs, hitting Geroy Simon and Taj Smith on two majors apiece while surrendering his first interception of the season.

CFL rushing leader Kory Sheets finished with 91 on 20 carries but had two touchdowns.

Winnipeg linebacker Henoc Muamba was solid with a game-high nine tackles but it's still hard to see how Winnipeg can match up with Saskatchewan for a full 60 minutes.

Pick: Roughriders

Soccer. Herdman sticking around as women's coach

The man who coached the Canadian women's soccer team to a historic bronze medal at the London Olympics has made a long-term commitment to remain with the program.

John Herdman said extending his contract with the Canadian Soccer Association through the 2020 Summer Games gives him the chance to build on what has already been accomplished.

"It's a wonderful opportunity to be able to lead a legacy," Herdman told a news conference in Vancouver Thursday. "We have been planning for a 10-year plan since I came into the organization."

"To know you can actually see that through and you've got the backing and support of people, it's a great place to be a leader."

NHL camp

"My goal is to make the Leafs this year. I'm training hard. I want to get on the ice a lot, have a good camp."

Toronto's 2012 top pick Morgan Rielly, who is currently at an NHL rookie tournament trying to crack the Leafs roster. At 19, Rielly is ineligible to play in the AHL, so it's either the Leafs or back to Moose Jaw, where his billets and a place on the junior team await.

Tennis. Murray blows chance at U.S. Open repeat

Andy Murray's reign as defending U.S. Open champion ended Thursday in a surprising, frustration-filled 6-4, 6-3, 6-2 quarter-final loss to ninth-seeded Stanislas Wawrinka.

The third-seeded Murray won his first Grand Slam title at Flushing Meadows last year and his second at Wimbledon this July. But he was over-matched from the beginning on a blustery day in New York City. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

You need to get your work-rest balance sorted out. Most likely you have overdone it in recent weeks and now need to crash out for a while. Next time, try not to go to such extremes.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Creative and artistic plans are under good stars but you may not be able to do all the things you were hoping to — at least not yet. You'll know when the time is right to act.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

It will be so easy to say the wrong thing at the wrong time to the wrong person today. If you do open your mouth when you should have kept it closed, you should apologize quickly.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

According to the planets there is someone out there who is trying to make you look bad. Why? Because they are jealous, that's why. In a way, you should take it as a compliment. But watch your back as well.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Expect a certain amount of criticism today, most likely from people who do not agree with your spending plans. Perhaps they have a point but they won't change your ways by going on and on about it.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Plan every step carefully. You cannot afford sloppy thinking now, not if you are to move up in the world and become the mover and shaker you know you can be. Think and act like a professional.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Cosmic activity in the most sensitive area of your chart urges you to confront your fears. You can sweep your worries under the bed if you want but deep down you will know they're still there.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Before you commit yourself to a new plan, you must work out how much it is going to cost in time, effort and money. You may need help from family or friends. Ask and you will receive.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You need to make a decision concerning your status and with Jupiter, your ruler, about to be touched by the Sun you can make it with confidence. Whatever it is you desire, the universe will give it to you.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Make sure you know all the facts about a situation, especially if it could cost you money if it goes wrong. Once you have signed your name, there will be no going back.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You may have been super confident yesterday, when the moon was new. But like the moon, your moods can change rapidly and you will want to keep it low key today.

Pisces

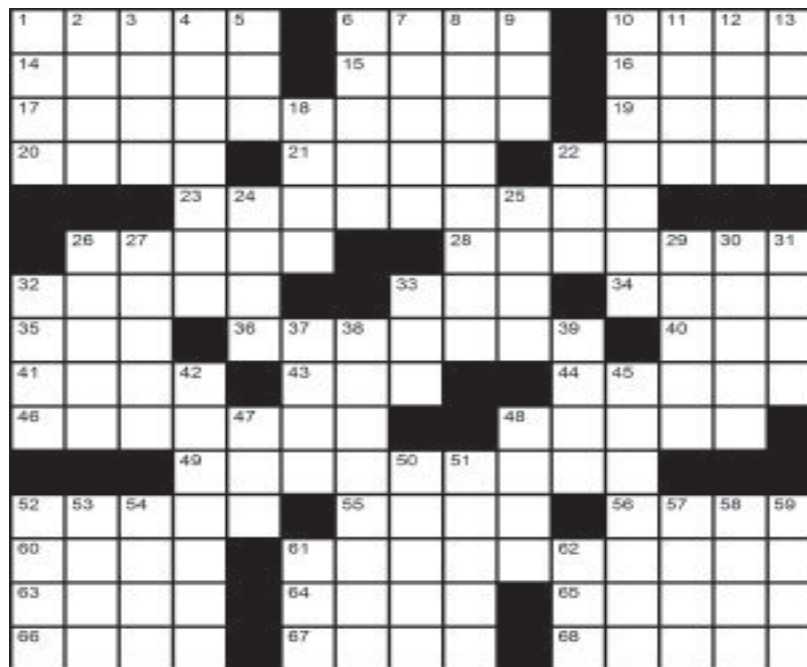

Feb. 20 - March 20

Those around you may be lacking in confidence but you aren't and over the next 24 hours your talents will be in demand. Dealing with others' problems will take your mind off your own. SALLY BROMPTON
